Nutritional Counseling 7th Edition

Lesson 15 Test Questions

Question 1
Goal-setting is a key strategy in
A. the Nutrition Care Process.
B. Social cognitive theory.
C. Motivational interviewing.
D. All of the above

Question 2
When helping a client choose a goal, it's best to
A. focus on identifying the smallest goal that is achievable and worthwhile.
B. ask the client how much they think they can accomplish.
C. select a broadly stated goal.
D. B and C

Question 3
While providing clues to a client's strengths and potential barriers, the _____ may seem invasive to some clients and may not be culturally sensitive.
A. 24-hour recall
B. diet history interview
C. client assessment questionnaire and historical data form
D. All of the above

Question 4
Which diet assessment tool is quick, but occasionally unreliable, as over and under reporting does occur?
A. 24-hour recall
B. diet history interview
C. client assessment questionnaire and historical data form
D. All of the above

Question 5
One small baked potato can be estimated to be the same size as
A. a small fist.
B. a deck of cards.
C. a baseball.
D. a computer mouse.

Question 6
Which dietary assessment tool can also be used as an intervention technique to alter food habits?
A. A food diary
B. Diet history interview
C. 24-hour recall
D. All of the above

Question 7
In a clinical setting, you may consider a general food frequency questionnaire and a _____ to best evaluate your client's food intake.
A. food diary
B. diet history interview
C. client assessment questionnaire and historical data form
D. 24-hour recall

Question 8
Which of the following questions would NOT be recommended for an effective 24-hour recall?
A. What did you eat for breakfast?
B. What foods were first consumed after waking up today?
C. How much butter did you use on your toast?
D. What foods were consumed during meal preparation?

Question 9
The World Health Organization suggests using a BMI of _____ as the level indicating overweight for Pacific Islanders.
A. 23
B. 25
C. 26
D. 27.5

Question 4
Height-weight tables are still a reliable tool to determine a healthy weight.
A. True
B. False